

Photo Credit: Habitat for Humanity

Land Rights for the Untenured Poor: Testing a Business Model

“Land Rights for The Untitled Poor: Testing a Business Model” profiles the challenges Habitat for Humanity International encountered when it tried to develop a viable business model for services that would improve tenure security for low-income households taking out small home improvement loans. The case study lands on an emerging success story in Indonesia.

READ MORE

COVID-19: Profiles of Seven Governments' Responses

The new COVID-response coordination series profiles how seven governments have tried to increase the speed and effectiveness of collaboration across departments, levels of government, and the public-private divide. The first three in the series—New Zealand, Vietnam, and Republic of Georgia—are currently available, with new contributions soon to join them.

EXPLORE THE SERIES

Innovations for Successful Societies

+1 609-258-5258 | iss@princeton.edu | successfulsocieties.princeton.edu

Join the ISS
Network

 PRINCETON UNIVERSITY